About City BuildHERS

Here's what we know to be true – traditionally, our cities have been imagined, designed, and built by men. While we can't change the past, we can certainly steer change for the future.

City BuildHERS was developed by two women in Ottawa's construction industry, Jennifer Cross and Kristen Buter. Brought together by a common goal, their objective is to connect women in all sectors that contribute to city building, and to form strong, supportive, strategic networks and partnerships with each other.

As a collective, we have an opportunity right now to create a vision for our cities that is inclusive and sustainable for all. This requires more women contributing their skills, experience, and expertise to our built environment in a meaningful way. Our aim is to eliminate the current silos and fragmented networks by focusing on highlighting and inter-connecting women that will set them up for success.
